Gas Monkey is an indica-leaning hybrid derived from Grease Monkey and a second, gas-forward genetic line. It is characterized by a pronounced skunky and fuel-like aromatic profile, complemented by subtle herbal and woody undertones that add depth and complexity.

The flowers are dense and well-developed, displaying bright orange pistils and a thick layer of frosty, resinous trichomes that visually emphasize the cultivar's premium quality. The intense, gas-dominant aroma becomes immediately apparent, reflecting the cultivar's strong genetic background and terpene expression.

Patient-reported experiences associate cultivars with this profile with a sense of physical relaxation and release of tension. Such varieties are often referenced in the context of evening use, particularly in routines focused on rest, recovery, and overall physical comfort.
